

Fellow Respiratory Therapist (RT),

As RT's, we are always present when an endotracheal tube goes in, and when it comes out regardless of the circumstance. For this reason, we spend a lot of time working with patients who are receiving end of life care. It is important that RT's feel comfortable when working with patients receiving end of life care and understand how to handle moral distress.

We want to take a look at the comfort level of RT's when working with patients receiving end of life care and dealing with moral distress. This information will help give us a better understanding of whether the education that RT's are currently provided is adequate or may need some improvements.

This survey is a needs-assessment survey and is completely anonymous. Please click this link: https://ualbertahserc.ca1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_af0E7u2x03sFJeR to fill out the survey. It will take no longer than 5-10 minutes and you can answer as little or as much as you like (University of Alberta Ethics ID# Pro00100827).

We appreciate your input and support in the endeavor!

If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to contact Brittany Ferraro at bferraro@ualberta.ca

Thank you,
Brittany Ferraro RRT, BHSc